Portfolio Manager Commentary

The Meridian Growth Fund delivered a strong second quarter, returning 7.42% net of fees compared to 6.88% for the Russell 1000 Growth Index, an outperformance of 54 basis points. Performance was primarily driven by our overweight position in information technology, where holdings in semiconductor and cloud infrastructure companies benefited from accelerating enterprise demand for compute capacity. Nova Semiconductor Inc. was the largest individual contributor to returns during the quarter, advancing over 22% on stronger-than-expected data center revenue guidance.

Health care holdings also contributed positively, led by Cardinal Health Dynamics following favorable clinical trial results for its lead pipeline candidate. Detractors from performance included our position in Northgate Media Group, which declined amid softer advertising spending in the quarter, and a modest cash drag given elevated short-term rates relative to broad equity market returns.

Looking ahead to the third quarter, we remain constructive on the outlook for large-cap growth equities, supported by resilient corporate earnings and continued capital investment in artificial intelligence infrastructure. We continue to monitor valuation dispersion within the technology sector closely and have modestly trimmed positions where we believe near-term expectations have become overly optimistic. The Fund's cash position of 5.2% provides flexibility to add to high-conviction names during periods of volatility.

Risk Disclosures

Investing involves risk, including possible loss of principal. Growth stocks may be more volatile than other types of investments and may underperform during periods when value or other investment styles are favored. The Fund's concentration in the information technology sector may make its performance more volatile than that of a fund investing more broadly across sectors. Please read the Fund's prospectus carefully before investing.
